

California Consumer Privacy Act

Content Collected: Former Customers with No Quicken ID and Visitors

Content Collected: Former Customers with no Quicken ID and Visitors

Listed below are the details of personal information collected by Quicken as requested by you under the California Consumer Privacy Act.

We show that you requested this information as a either a California resident who has never been a Quicken customer, or a California resident who has been a Quicken customer at one time but never had a Quicken subscription or a Quicken ID.

If this is not correct, and you have or had a Quicken ID, please return to the CCPA Privacy Page and make your request again using the link for If you have a Quicken ID

The categories of personal information Quicken has collected about you

Quicken has not collected any categories of personal information about you in the last 12 months. If you visited Quicken.com, we may have accessed your Internet Protocol (IP) Address and Internet Activity. However, we did not store or save this information on our servers.

The categories of sources from which Quicken collects your personal information

If you visited Quicken.com within the last 12 months, and we accessed your IP Address and / or your Internet Activity, we did it automatically through your use of certain pages on our site.

The business or commercial purpose for collecting or selling your personal information.

Quicken accesses your IP Address and Internet activity to improve our website experience by analyzing your interaction with our pages, and to market products and services we believe may be of interest to you.

The categories of third parties with whom Quicken shares your personal information.

We may have shared your IP Address and Internet Activity with our analytics partners and our advertising partners.

The specific pieces of personal information Quicken has collected about you

Quicken has not collected, stored, or saved any personal information about you in the last 12 months. If you were at one time a Quicken customer, we may have collected your contact information and Quicken version, but this was not done in the past year.

Jan 8, 2019